The Prepper Survival Stockpile

Nobody knows when a disaster will hit, but there is something you can do to prepare yourself. Become a prepper and build a prepper stockpile!

The least you can do to prep is to have a complete stockpile at your disposal. All it takes is one good snowstorm or other scenarios where you can't get to a store for you to be trapped in your home. You will need supplies. The first chapter will focus on where to go to stock up and become a prepper as maintaining a stockpile can get expensive and you want to be able to get the best savings on bulk items.

In this book you will get an idea of where to shop for your Prepper Stockpile in order to stay within your budget

Stores like Costco and Sam's Club are the obvious choices, but a good rule of thumb is to follow the deals wherever they may lead to. Once you have your supplies, you need to have a good place to store them. Before you go out, choose a spot in your pantry and/or garage that is big enough to store water, lots of canned goods, and other similar items.

What prepping supplies do you really need in your prepper stockpile?

So what kind of products does one buy for a prepper stockpile? Think survival food: water, canned beans, canned meat, and rice. These are the basics for any prepper, but you will also need items like canned veggies and fruit, vitamins, nuts, and so on. Variety is key with food since you do not know how long an emergency scenario may last and you don't want to be stuck eating beans and rice for months on end. Having a complete stockpile is not just about food. You will also need to have medical and hygiene supplies on hand. Chapter 3 continues the stockpile list with security items; power equipment like flashlights and batteries; and tools.
