Economic Growth and Development (2nd Edition) By Hendrik Van den Berg

This textbook covers the full range of topics and issues normally included in a course on economic growth and development. Both mainstream economic perspectives as well as the multi-paradigmatic, inter-disciplinary, and dynamic-evolutionary perspectives from heterodox economics are detailed. Economic development is viewed in terms of the long-run well-being of humanity, social stability, environmental sustainability, and just distribution of economic gains, not simply as the growth of GDP. Furthermore, this textbook explicitly recognizes the complexity of economic development by linking economic activity to our broader social and natural environments.

The textbook's unique feature is its focus on the natural environment. Both the historical effects of economic development on the environment and the environmental constraints on future economic development are thoroughly discussed in two chapters on environmental issues and policies. In fact, because economic development is defined in terms of economic, social, and environmental sustainability, the natural environment is included in discussions throughout the book.

The textbook is inter-disciplinary: knowledge from fields such as sociology, psychology, political science, economic history, and ecology is called on to enhance the economic analysis. A thorough historical account of the development of the principal paradigms of economic development is also included, and the important issues of institutional development and cultural change merit their own chapters. Two chapters on technological change holistically focus on production technologies as well as the dynamic performance of entire economic, social, and ecological systems. Also, the important relationship between economic development and globalization is presented in three chapters on international trade, international finance and investment, and immigration from both orthodox and heterodox perspectives.

Readership: Students and researchers who are interested in economic development, international economics, international trade, international finance and investment.

About the Author

Hendrik Van den Berg is Professor of Economics at the University of Nebraska Lincoln, where he teaches economic growth and development as well as international economics. He received B.A. and M.A. degrees in economics from the State University of New York at Albany in 1971 and 1973, respectively, and M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in economics from the University of Wisconsin Madison in 1987 and 1989. Between studying in New York and Wisconsin, Hendrik served as a Foreign Service Officer at the United States Embassy in Managua, Nicaragua in the position of Commercial Officer, and at the U.S. Trade Center in São Paulo, Brazil, as Market Research and Promotion Officer. He left the United States Department of State to manage the São Paulo office of Marsteller Advertising, and later worked as Planning Manager for Singer of Brazil, also in São Paulo. Hendrik traveled widely for Singer and experienced the challenges of living and managing businesses in developing economies. In 1985, Hendrik decided to return to his first love, economics, and enrolled at the University of Wisconsin.

Hendrik has published many articles on exchange rates, international trade, alternative estimates of economic growth, the empirical relationship between international trade and economic growth, and, most recently, the determinants and consequences of immigration on source and destination countries. Currently, he is examining the biases of neoclassical economics and the influence of the neoclassical paradigm on the fields of international economics and economic development.

Hendrik also regularly writes for general audiences, including monthly articles on economic policy, peace, and social justice in Nebraska Report, the newspaper of Nebraskans for Peace. He also writes for the Nebraska Worker, the newsletter of the Nebraska Industrial Workers of the World. He is often invited to speak on immigration, foreign trade, and international finance.

Hendrik has written several economics textbooks, including Economic Growth and Development, 1st Edition (McGraw-Hill, 2001), International Economics (McGraw-Hill, 2003), International Trade and Economic Growth (M.E. Sharpe, 2006), The Economics of Immigration (Springer, 2009), International Finance and Open-Economy Macroeconomics (World Scientific, 2010), and International Economics: A Heterodox Approach (M.E. Sharpe, 2011).
