Ancient Guardians: The Uninvited (Ancient Guardians Supernatural Series, Book 2) (Volume 2) By S.L. Morgan

AN AMAZON BEST SELLING BOOK and NOMINATED FOR A GLOBAL EBOOK AWARD!

The highly anticipated sequel to "The Legacy of the Key" promises to keep you turning pages until you reach the end!

Book 2 of The Ancient Guardians Supernatural Series

After Reece Bryant, a college student from Earth, had her entire life turned upside down when she discovered her true genealogy, she never imagined that she would find utter happiness and a better life because of it. Not only did she discover that life exists beyond Earth, but that this new life would change her outlook on everything forever.

After she falls helplessly in love with the Emperor of Pemdass' son, Levi Oxley, she happily accepts his proposal of marriage, and she couldn't be more excited to start her new life with him in this enchanting dimension. Everything is ideal, and Reece's future with Levi promises to be nothing less than enchanting!

It is when unexpected occurrences begin to take place, that Reece and Levi's entire lives are turned upside down and they are left to wonder if their relationship was ever meant to be.

What readers are saying about "The Uninvited"

- "If this is what we have to look forward to, there will be many sleepless nights! Literally could not put it down! The tapestry woven in this second novel is exquisite!" David Rains
- "Once again, S.L. Morgan delivers another incredibly compelling classic tale that takes you on an adventure in the magical land of this enchanting world called Pemdass. Book 1 was a pure thrill and Book 2 even more so. I am eagerly waiting to read the next three books in the series." -Readers' Favorite
- Sequels aren't generally as good as the first book, but this is definitely an exception. -Reader's Favorite Reviewer

- "Oh my gosh. Another wonderful book from S.L. Morgan! I didn't think it was possible to adore this series any more than I already did, but she has made the impossible possible! Yet again, I'm extremely excited to read the next one!" - Michaela, Goodreads Reviewer

??? Confident that Reece is safe in the protected lands of Pemdás, the Guardians soon discover that they are mistaken.

Betrayal, dark forces, and a relentless urge to take 'The Key' from the protective guard of Pemdás will lead to something the Guardians would never predict could take place. A surprising turn of events will leave the Guardians vulnerable and Reece near death.

??? Will the Guardians be able to stand by their vow of protecting the key?

??? Will Levi risk everything to protect the only woman he will ever love?

It is Reece's only hope when she believes she has finally taken her last breath.

??? Your journey back to the supernatural and whimsical dimension of Pemdás awaits!

Review

Better than the first. "If this is what we have to look forward to, there will be many sleepless nights! Literally could not put it down! The tapestry woven in this second novel is exquisite! Can't wait to see what the next installment brings!" -David Rains

"The Uninvited continues to take you on a beautiful romantic adventure and a journey of discovery into the unique Pemdass traditions and the hypnotizing scenery. I am so happy I got the chance to read this second book in the Ancient Guardians series. Book 1 was a pure thrill and Book 2 even more so. I am eagerly waiting to read the next three books in the series." -Reviewed By Faridah Nassozi for Readers' Favorite

"Morgan has sorta ruined all other fantasy series I've read because her imagination is AMAZING! If you read any review of LOTK, Morgan is praised for her world of Pemdass. I wasn't expecting to be awed even more..." -Candy, Sour Skittles Blog

I really enjoyed this second book in the Ancient Guardians series. The books are science-fiction-romantic-suspense -- and a good mix of all of them. The romance scenes are modestly done, even while the characters are engaged. I appreciate the "old-time" morals that the characters have exhibited thus far in the series." -Chris Yorgason, Goodreads reader

From the Author

Please note: This book contains zero sex. The characters do engage in romantic situations that involve kissing, but they do not engage in sex. There is zero explicit content in this book.

Excerpt:

Levi stood in front of Areion and gazed into his horse's fierce golden eyes, letting bloodlust consume him. This is who Levi was; this is who the Guardians were. They were as fierce as the horses on which they rode, and equally as fearless. They didn't fear death, and they didn't carry the weakness of emotion within them. They craved the fight. They thirsted for victory; and most of all, the bloodshed of those who would seek to destroy them and their cause. They were valiant men who were born to train for battle unrelentingly.

From the Inside Flap

Seeing the coastline again made memories from her life in San Diego come rushing back to her. A strange pain stabbed in her heart as thoughts of her father returned to her. She hadn't thought about him much lately. Levi had filled the void that his death left her with; but for the first time since she had been in Pemdass, she saw a landscape that reminded her of being home with her father. She fixed her eyes on the surf rolling in as memories of her father flooded over her, accompanied by the grief of losing him. She inhaled deeply, and forced back the tears. I miss you, Dad, she said to him in her thoughts, as the carriage stopped unexpectedly. Reece snapped out of her daze to find Elizabeth watching her with concern. She had been so absorbed with remembering her father that she hadn't noticed her cheeks were wet from tears that had been streaming down her face.

"Is everything okay?" Elizabeth asked, as she handed Reece a handkerchief to dry her eyes.

Reece sniffed, while blotting her wet cheeks. "Yes, of course. I'm sorry, it's very beautiful here. I grew up at the beach as a child--" Her words caught in her throat. She managed a confident grin, took a deep breath, and tried to speak with casual ease. "I guess all of my memories are coming back and hitting me all at once." She shrugged, but the uneasy pain in her heart was still there.

Elizabeth smiled and reached out, placing a caring hand over Reece's. "Do not apologize, Reece."

The door to the carriage opened. "We'll see you then, Harrison!" Levi called out, and then brought his attention to the ladies in the carriage. He glanced at Reece with an expression of sympathy and concern. He looked at Elizabeth, "I believe I will take this time to introduce Reece to the beauty of Pemdass' shorelines," his promising eyes returned to Reece's as he extended his hand to her. "We will see all of you at the estate this evening."

Reece accepted Levi's hand and let the beauty of his brilliant eyes ease her heartache. Having him in her life was so comforting, especially at a time like this. Before Reece could question what Levi was doing, he kindly guided her away from the carriage. The convoy was soon continuing its journey on the cobblestone roads, leaving Levi and Reece alone. Reece felt mildly embarrassed, wondering if she had caused a scene by becoming emotional in the carriage.

Levi turned to face her, and tenderly brushed his thumb under her eye, capturing a stray tear. "Care to join me on a stroll along the shoreline?" he asked softly.

This was exactly what she needed, and her heart swelled with love for this man. "I would like that, thank you."

Levi drew her arm up into his, and they strolled through the sandy banks and down toward the water.

Reece, still somewhat frazzled by her unexpected emotions, remained quiet. She inhaled deeply of the salty air, enjoying the familiar fragrances of the beach. The warm breeze rushed through her hair and soothed her spirits even more. She leaned into Levi, absorbing everything she loved about this environment. "I haven't gone back to the beach since my dad died." Her eyes began burning again as she fought back the tears. "I was too afraid. There were too many memories of him there," she said, as she glanced away from Levi and studied the glittery foam of the waves rushing into the shoreline.

"You and your father were particularly close," he said in his low, smooth voice. "I learned that very early when I was assigned as your Guardian."

Reece nodded, but couldn't respond. Never once did she think that seeing a beach in Pemdass would resurrect these memories of her father. Now, here she was, an emotional wreck, and Levi was about to witness her having a total breakdown.

They strolled silently together through the thick, powdery sand before Levi stopped and pulled Reece into a sturdy embrace. "I remember the first time we were assigned to guard you." He placed a kiss on her forehead. "You had recently graduated high school, and I believe you were the first woman from Earth I had ever encountered who was distressed about the idea of leaving her home for college." He laughed softly. "You and your father walked along the oceanfront, and he seemed to be the one begging you to leave and follow your dreams."

"That was one of the only arguments my dad and I ever got into." Reece said as she looked up at Levi. "You were following me then?" she asked, intrigued by the idea that Levi was around at that time.

"Yes," he said, as he ran his hands along her back. "I thought it was admirable that your father encouraged you to pursue your goals, even though the last thing he wanted was your absence."

Tears formed in Reece's eyes again. "I turned down that university--I couldn't leave him, Levi." Her eyes began throbbing and burning as she forcefully fought back her tears. "I might've been a baby, but I was all he had for family after my mother died." She frowned, and then clung to Levi tighter, finding security in him. "So I decided to stay in San Diego for him; and how did he thank me?" She stepped back and stared intently out at the ocean. She crossed her arms and faced this memory as if she were looking her father in the eyes. "He left me," she said coldly. A shiver of guilt coursed through her as she tried to work through her emotions of anger. She sighed softly, and looked up at Levi. His handsome face displayed nothing but love and concern for her.

Levi traced his fingers along her forehead, and his gentle touch calmed her further. Reece sighed again. "I'm really sorry about this. I truly thought I had made peace with his death. How can I possibly be angry at someone for dying?" She sighed in defeat. "Even when I went to settle out the last of his estate before I was brought to Pemdass, I felt so much better about letting him go and moving on." "My love, you mustn't fault yourself for having these emotions." He embraced her again. "Those who survive the death of a loved one are left with emotions that manifest themselves in many ways. The best thing to do is to embrace them, and know that it is your way of working through your loss. There is no right or wrong emotion, but how you react to them can either benefit you, or harm you." He affectionately brought his lips to her forehead. "You are never wrong to express them, as the more you do, you're releasing them and becoming that much closer to healing. That is not weakness; it is the single bravest act a person can do." He tilted her chin up so her eyes would meet his. "He will always be a part of your life, if only through your memories now."

Reece studied Levi's expression. "He would have definitely approved of you." Levi flashed a tiny grin. "Is that so?" he said, with an arch of his brow. "A man from another world?" he teased. He caressed her cheek. "I will promise you this, my love; I will spend every day of my life ensuring that you are loved beyond measure, and that whether or not I have your father's consent of marriage, he will not be displeased with my care of his daughter."

Levi knelt down and removed the straps of her left shoe. Reece's heart skipped several beats as he tenderly caressed her ankle. He ran his fingers along the flesh of her calf muscle as he slowly removed the strap of her heel. After her shoes were removed, he interlaced the straps into his long fingers and rose up. "Now, from what I recall, the woman I fell helplessly in love with has always enjoyed walking through the surf," He kissed her lips briefly, "and feeling the warm sand beneath her bare feet."
