The Dialectical Method of Thinking By Edmond Bordeaux Szekely

It is no mere chance that modern philosophy begins by dealing with method. Descartes' Discourse on Method marks its commencement. All modern philosophy is based on method, and not only philosophy, but all the modern sciences, too. We must learn to look at things through a new pair of spectacles-the spectacles of modern scientific method. If we examine the world with these glasses it will be revealed as an entirely new world-not only in the sphere of politics but also in that of science.
